Shelter for Survivors of Slavery and Human Trafficking

Rebuilding
Human Dignity

The Reality

Victims of human trafficking are living right where you live in the United States, in big cities and small towns.

You might see victims in any one of the occupations below:

- Nanny
- House Cleaner
- Restaurant worker
- Gardener
- Skilled laborer
- Factory worker

Trafficked people are also exploited to engage in illegal activities such as prostitution.

Many victims of Human Trafficking are afraid to leave their lives of bondage because they:

- Do not have a safe shelter
- Do not know their rights
- Do not see themselves as victims of crime

Sheltering Survivors of Human Trafficking

Victims of human trafficking suffer from a combination of psychological effects—feelings of abandonment, betrayal, anxiety and depression, post-traumatic stress syndrome and other mental disorders. They experience low self-esteem. Many remain vulnerable to re-exploitation and re-victimization.

To break that cycle, they need a safe place to stay, coaching, mental and physical health care and legal advocacy. They also need knowledge that God loves them and will meet them at their most broken. Most US communities do not have dedicated shelters to address the needs particular to trafficked victims.

At Freedom House, our goal is to meet these needs with safe, secure housing and a variety of services set up as a launching pad for freedom and healing. We want to show each victim that they are valued, and that their dignity is worth rebuilding, upholding and protecting.
